01 SEASONAL PERSPECTIVE

The Season of Renewal

As the days begin to lengthen, energy starts to return in subtle ways. People spend a little more time outside, connecting with neighbours. What felt uncertain or heavy often begins to lighten.

Spring is a season of emergence, where reflection begins to turn into renewal. With that shift comes greater clarity. Things feel more grounded and less reactive.

This time of year creates space to see where things stand, understand what has changed, and begin moving ahead with a clearer sense of what matters.

At Northern Light Wealth we see spring as a natural point of transition, where the understanding gained through winter reflection begins to take shape through conversation.

Before decisions are made, this is a time to create alignment, ask questions, and ensure the next steps reflect what matters most.

Spring is not the season for resolving everything. It is the season when the conversations begin.

02 STEWARDSHIP PRINCIPLE

The Bank of Mom & Dad

How Support is Given and Experienced

As clarity returns through the spring months, many families begin to consider how they can support the next generation. What was once transferred at the time of passing now happens earlier, in real time.

The intention is thoughtful. What is less visible is how that support is experienced by adult children, their partners, and across the wider family. Which is where the question sits:

When money moves without conversation, what is it understood to mean?

Over time wealth can drift, not because of the capital itself, but because of how it is understood. Even well-intentioned support can become disconnected from what it was meant to represent.

Support lands best when it meets a real need at a specific moment, and arrives with context. The dollars may be the same. Within one family, the impact is not.

A QUESTION TO ASK

“What would help most right now, and what would it mean to you if we did it?”

A STORY TO SHARE

“Let me tell you why we decided to help now rather than later, and what we hoped it would make possible for you.”

Spring is not a time to resolve these differences. It is the time when conversations begin.

Reflection

Spring has always been a natural time to reset before summer. Financially, that reset comes into focus through tax season.

As information is gathered and organized, the past year comes into view clearly. Income, investment activity, fees and outcomes are brought together, often revealing a more complete picture than was visible through the year.

For Northern Light, this is a point of alignment: ensuring what was implemented through the year is reflected clearly in what is reported. It is a season for making sure nothing meaningful has been overlooked.

We have centralized your investment-related tax reporting in one secure location, making it easier for you and your accountant to find what you need.

When this foundation is clear, decisions made later tend to be more measured, better timed, and less reactive.

If being proactive is in the cards, please reach out — for a Stewardship Review, or for re-discovery and discovery conversations.

04 MARKET VIEW

Looking Forward

Global tensions have escalated, with active conflict in both Europe and the Middle East. Oil has moved sharply higher and gas prices are reflecting it in real time. It feels loud, fast, and uncertain. That is the nature of these periods.

Markets respond accordingly while headlines compete for attention. Pullbacks and repricing are part of that process, not an exception to it.

What matters is not whether these moments occur, but how portfolios are positioned when they do. It is why we rebalance and take profits during periods of strength, and why our portfolios are prepared for exactly this environment.

Year to date this is showing up. While headlines reflect broad volatility, portfolios positioned with discipline and liquidity have seen meaningfully less disruption than the noise would suggest.

Corrections are not a matter of if, but when. Stay steady, have a plan, and you will be okay.
