

FOR BUSINESS OWNERS AND THEIR FAMILIES

SaleReady

Your business may be ready to sell.
Are you ready for what comes next?

If a sale may be within the next three years, the time to prepare the business, the family and the wealth that follows is now.

Seasonal Perspective. Daily Discipline.

PHASE 1 • OWNER READINESS

Prepare before the transaction controls the timeline.

A business can sometimes sell quickly.
Readiness usually cannot.

WHY START NOW

FIRST 6 MONTHS

Understand and structure

Objectives, readiness, the professional team and what must happen first.

NEXT 24 MONTHS

Prepare and execute

Readiness inside the business, and outside it: independence, priorities and purpose.

FINAL 6 MONTHS

Transition and close

The transaction, closing, liquidity, handoffs and the move to family wealth.

A sale may be planned years in advance, or begin with an unsolicited offer. Retirement, health or family circumstances can accelerate decisions quickly. Once a transaction drives the timeline, choices narrow.

QUESTIONS THAT COME FIRST

What does financial independence look like after the business?

How much of the family's wealth is concentrated in the company?

What does your family want life to look like after the business is sold?

Preparation creates the ability to make thoughtful decisions before circumstances begin making them for you.

PHASE 2 · TRANSITION COORDINATION

The business may be for sale. Your life is not.

A completed transaction and a prepared owner are not the same thing.

A business transition rarely involves one decision or one professional. Tax consequences influence liquidity. Liquidity influences investment decisions. Transaction structure can affect family wealth. Family expectations can affect what comes next.

Decisions made during the transaction can have consequences long after the closing documents are signed. Important transitions involve many professionals and many moving pieces; SaleReady helps keep responsibilities, decisions and next steps visible so important work does not quietly fall between them.

DECISIONS THAT STAY CONNECTED

WHAT COMES NEXT

Coordination is knowing how the pieces fit.

Follow-through is helping ensure the pieces keep moving.

PHASE 2 · TRANSITION COORDINATION

Each professional has a role. SaleReady keeps the transition connected.

Business, tax, transaction, liquidity and family decisions do not happen in isolation.

The owner and family remain at the centre while responsibilities, decisions and next steps stay visible.

Northern Light Wealth does not replace legal, tax, accounting, valuation or transaction advice.

PHASE 3 · FAMILY WEALTH STEWARDSHIP

From operating wealth to family wealth

The business may become liquidity.
The responsibility remains.

Stewardship of the wealth that follows a transition begins before the proceeds arrive.

For decades, the owner may have understood their principal asset intimately: the company, its people, its risks, its cash flow and its opportunities.

After a transition, that concentrated operating asset can become liquid family capital that may need to support the family for decades and create conversations that were never necessary while the wealth remained inside the company.

The owner may also be navigating a change in identity, purpose and responsibility after years or decades of building. SaleReady continues alongside the owner, the family and their other professional advisors.

A successful transition should not be measured only by the value realized at closing. It should also be measured by the preparedness of the people responsible for stewarding that value afterward.

WHERE TO BEGIN

The goal is not simply to sell well. It is to be ready for what follows.

A business can take decades to build and months to sell. If a sale may be possible within the next three years, it is not too early to begin.

BEFORE A TRANSACTION

There is time to prepare.

An owner is considering a sale, or believes one may be possible within the next few years. Preparation can begin with the owner, the family, the business and the wealth that follows, before urgency sets the timetable.

WHEN A TRANSACTION IS ALREADY MOVINGThere is still time to coordinate.

An offer, a process or a transaction has already arrived. Tax, liquidity, family and investment decisions can still be coordinated around the work already underway, so the transaction and the life that follows are considered together.

THE SALEREADY RESOURCE LIBRARY

Owner-readiness preparation, questions to discuss with accountants and lawyers, professional-team coordination, liquidity preparation, and post-sale investment and family considerations.

A conversation with Northern Light Wealth is the natural first step. nlwealth.ca/saleready
